

Five State Lodges Send Teams To The Jewish Post Bowling Tourney Sunday

Bowlers from five lodges in Indiana will compete for the prizes and trophies in the first annual Jewish Post tournament for B'nai B'rith lodges this Sunday afternoon at the Parkway Bowling Alleys, 34th and Illinois Sts. Teams that will bowl represent the South Bend, Terre Haute, Marion, Anderson and Indianapolis lodges, it was announced by Jack Falk, tournament chairman.

At the same time, announcement was made that the public is invited to watch the bowling which will begin promptly at 1 o'clock.

Indianapolis Lodge will enter a full quota of six teams, while the State lodges have each entered one team.

Anderson's Nathan Speir Lodge, captained by Ben Krauss, will enter

The team above, composed of Art Efroymson, Saul Koby, Max Farb, Captain Jack Falk and Morris Goldberg, which won the Indianapolis Lodge championship two weeks ago, will bowl in the Jewish Post tourney this Sunday.

Mr. Krauss, Harry Kohn, Marshall Schlossberg, Joe Simkin and Sam Sposeep with Julian Glaser as alternate.

Mamre Lodge of South Bend, with Melvin Tomber as captain, has entered Irving Hurwich, Burton Weinstein, Mr. Tomber, D. Fishman and Ben Weinstein.

Terre Haute B'nai B'rith has entered H. Adelman, M. Levin, I. Gorman, S. Levin and Bob Schultze, with Mr. Schultze as captain.

From Marion's Saul Hutner Lodge, entrants are Dave Lurie, who is captain, Bill Glogas, Bob Glogas, Frank Maidenber and Charles Feigel, with Al Fink as alternate.

Large trophies for the winners are being awarded by the Indiana Fur Company and the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Indianapolis, to be known as the Indiana Fur Company Cup and the R. Domont & Sons Cup.

Merchandise awards, which will be distributed, in addition to the cash prizes and the trophies, include a pint of whiskey from the Acme Liquor Store, given by E. Lebowitz; a gift certificate, good for one hat, from the Adam Hat Store, given by Bob Congress; a necktie from Argus-Yaver, given by Dave Yaver; one-half dozen Fieldcrest pillowcases from the Household Specialty Company, given by Sid Shane; six cans of J. P. M. fancy fruits from the J. P. Michael Company, given by Bill Meyers Sr., and two neckties from A. G. Efroymson, Inc., given by Art Efroymson, and an electric presser, given by Jack Falk, editor of the Hoosier Bowler.

JUNIORS TO HEAR CHARRY

Rabbi Elias Charry will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Council of Jewish Juniors, at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, April 20, at Kirshbaum Center. Election of officers will be held.

RUMMAGE SALE PLANNED

Plans are being made for the Hadassah Rummage Sale to be held in May to raise funds for Child Welfare activities. Members and their friends are asked to collect rummage for a call from the committee. Coat and dress hangers are also requested this year. If each member and her friends will contribute ten or more hangers, a sizable sum can be raised toward filling the Child Welfare quota.

General Council To Continue After Congress Quits

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
NEW YORK—The American Jewish Committee, B'nai B'rith and Jewish Labor Committee announced that the General Jewish Council intended to continue and to enlarge its scope, notwithstanding the withdrawal of the American Jewish Congress delegation.

"The three organizations who continue their membership in the General Jewish Council voiced their regret at the action of the American Jewish Congress and expressed their hope the American Jewish Congress would soon return to the General Jewish Council," the statement said.

The congress withdrew its delegation at a meeting on April 6 after the council had voted down the congress's proposal that the council dissolve.

The Stolen Aficomen

By LAZURE FRISCH

The warm rays of a mid-April sun playing through the windows of a modest little house touched the pretty forehead of the six-year-old Sylvia, the youngest of three children of the Levine household, as she lay asleep in her bed. She opened her large grey-blue eyes, and as if reminding herself of something important, jumped out of bed.

All of a sudden the quietness turned into commotion as Sylvia ran down the hall yelling as loud as her small voice would permit, "Today is Erev Pesach and tonight is when we have the beautiful Seder and the Aficomen." Sylvia was referring to the piece of Matzoh her father hid at each Seder. To a little girl of six who wanted a tricycle badly, this was an important expectation, and she was awaiting the Seder most eagerly. Her brother Eli, who was nine, and the older of the two, Sarah, had ideas of their own and were also awaiting the first Seder impatiently. Eli was dreaming of a new erector set and Sarah wished for a pen and pencil set. These two had had difficulty in falling asleep the night before, due to their excited state of mind, and were still in the dream world when the magic word "Aficomen" had reached their ears and woke them.

But by this time the whole Levine household was in motion.

In less than an hour, the three of them were walking to school discussing the Seder, each one thinking how he would grab the Aficomen and force father to meet his wishes.

Tax Laid On Shechita For Funds For Mikveh

Temporary imposition of a tax of two cents for each fowl slaughtered under shechita to provide funds for the maintenance of the city Mikveh, ritual bath house on the South Side, was announced this week by the Va-ad Ha-kashruth. For a number of years, the announcement said, the Mikveh has been financed by individuals, but due to the loss of support, the financial condition of the bath house has necessitated this new means of raising income.

AL SEGAL Speaks on Publicity

In The Jewish Post of Indianapolis there is a flaming argument over Jewish publicity in the daily press. It seems that Mr. Cohen, The Post's publisher, feels that matters strictly of Jewish interest only should not be allowed to clutter up the columns of the daily press. They belong in the Jewish press.

I myself have suffered acute pain to see some of the Jewish publicity that gets into the daily press. It seems to have to do largely with the vanities of Jewish leaders who like to see their names and pictures in the paper.

Of what public interest, for example, is the picnic of the K. K. Anshe Gaborim? I do not mean to asperse the great and good name of Anshe Gaborim or the superlative merits of its leaders. Who doesn't know how valiantly Anshe Gaborim has been paying off the mortgage? Who doesn't know the spaciousness of Anshe Gaborim's synagogue which can hold as many as a thousand people on Yom Kippur?

Nor can too much be said of its leadership. Who isn't acquainted with the virtues of its president, Mr. Zilch, who is the big gadget manufacturer, or of Mrs. Zilch, who with all her 50 years, looks so young. (Her friends are always asking how she manages to keep her figure.)

It was the Zilches who paid $100 for the key with which the doors of Anshe Gaborim were formally opened on the great day of its dedication.

This was also the day when Anshe Gaborim's treasurer paid $50 for one brick of the synagogue. For the benefit of the congregational funds they were auctioned off the bricks, brick by brick, and his bid was the highest.

No one can tell me anything against Anshe Gaborim. Nevertheless, I submit that it is none of the business of the general public, as represented by the daily press, that Anshe Gaborim is going to give a picnic, or that Anshe Gaborim is going to have a bar mizvah, or that Anshe Gaborim is about to install a new scroll of the Holy Law. Yet when Anshe Gaborim has a picnic it is made a matter that competes with the Axis for space in the daily press. Anshe Gaborim's publicity chairman sees to that. If he manages to get all the committee people into the papers, he may rise to be general chairman of next year's picnic or even president of the congregations in some year to come. Who can tell?

He is an indefatigable man. He is not content merely to have it made known to the world by a single notice that on a certain day Anshe Gaborim will give a picnic. The affair must be dinned into the ears of the public time and again until picnic day.

He marches from success to success: There is the day he gets the names of the entire lemonade committee into the columns of the daily press.

that gets in, then the prize committee, the lunch committee, the special events committee; finally, the picture of the general chairman. But the publicity chairman's magnum opus is the picture of the chairwoman of the ladies' auxiliary which is arranging the bridge games for the picnic.

As he looks at her picture he feels he has made an artistic contribution to the daily press. She looks so coyly out of the half-tone! The cute angle of her pretty head! The merry twinkle in her eye! He cannot but help feel that all this is something to enlarge the prestige of Anshe Gaborim in the world.

In the meantime, all the city editors have been working up to a nervous fret on account of Anshe Gaborim's picnic. City Editor Grogan, who is no anti-Semite at all, says he is glad Anshe Gaborim picnics come only once a year and hopes that the publicity chairman gets drowned at this year's picnic.

City Editor McTavish of the opposition paper, some of whose best friends are Jews, says for God's sake, here's that Jewish picnic again.

But for the sake of the Jewish circulation they keep on printing the frequent tidings of Anshe Gaborim's picnic. With the mistaken judgment of public opinion frequently found in newspaper people, they feel, somehow, that the Jewish circulation will rise up against the paper if the picture of the chairwoman of the ladies' auxiliary in charge of the bride games isn't printed.

I, myself, know what to do with matters like the Anshe Gaborim picnic. To me, in my function as a worker for the daily press, Jewish items of no general interest are occasionally brought. I have in mind particularly an item announcing that Melvin Glutz would be bar mizvah next Saturday. "I want this printed in the paper," his father said.

I asked myself: Who of the general public cares in the last that little Melvin Glutz is going to be bar mizvah next Saturday? In fact, how many of the general public know what bar mizvah is anyway? In what way does the news of Melvin Glutz's bar mizvah contribute to public information? What purpose will it serve to print Melvin's bar mizvah in the paper except the pleasure of his parents, who will exult, "Did you see Melvin's name in the paper?"

I tossed Melvin into the wastebasket. I should do the same with Anshe Gaborim's picnic if it came to me.

Melvin's parents probably said: Yes, that Segal is an anti-Semite. It hurts him to give a Jewish child a break. Nevertheless, I insist that our purely intra mural matters don't belong in the daily press. The Jewish press is a sufficient and competent medium for all affairs that pertain to the strictly private life of Israel.

To synagogues, to Zionist organizations, to Talmud Torahs, to Jewish lodges, I offer the following directions to wisdom in publicity: The doings and sayings of Jews and Jewish organizations are entitled to a place in the general public prints only when they are of general public interest.

Only when something Jewish touches the common life is it worth general publicity. A rabbi speaking, for example, on national Jewish budget-orthy in the daily press in the of speaking for a more just and he world should be heard in the of no public interest at all that dge is giving a social but it is that the B'nai B'rith lodge is Knights of Columbus for a charitable purpose.

It is not publicity important that Hadassah is having a party, that the Zionists are conducting an election, that Anshe Gaborim has bought a new Torah.

(In our town we do not even use the daily press to exploit the annual drive of the Jewish Welfare Fund.)

SIGMA ALPHA MU

Special
BLOOMINGTON—Nineteen years ago, on April 18, 1921, a group of eight young Jewish men students banded together on the campus of Indiana University to form the Sigma Zeta chapter of Sigma Alpha Mu, the first national Jewish fraternity in the state of Indiana.

Saturday night that fraternity celebrates its nineteenth birthday with its annual spring formal dance. More than 80 guests, including alumni and feminine escorts of the fratres, already have arrived in Bloomington to begin celebrating the gala week-end. Many of the couples will attend the annual Indiana University Junior Prom Friday night.

Sunday afternoon, the birthday banquet will be held in the ballroom of the Graham Hotel. Speakers will be Tete Dann, national S.A.M. officer and a past-president of the chapter; Sam Kroot ex-president of the Indianapolis Alumni Club; Sol Schwartz, chapter advisor, and the chapter officers. Fra Lou Finkle will act as master of ceremonies.

PI LAMBA PHI

Special
BLOOMINGTON—Alpha Theta chapter of Pi Lambda Phi, Indiana University, will play host next week-end to the first annual Mid-Western Officer's Training School of Pi Lambda Phi. The universities of Pittsburgh, Michigan, Wisconsin, Washington of St. Louis, Ohio State, Cincinnati, Toronto, McGill, Oklahoma, Chicago and Creighton will attend the conference.

Tentative plans of the two day school call for discussion of fraternity problems Saturday morning and afternoon and Sunday morning; a party for the delegates on Saturday night, and a huge banquet on Sunday noon.

A leading figure of the entire convention will be Mrs. Margaret Weymouth Jackson, famous Spencer, Ind. novelist, who will speak at the party at McCormick's Creek State Park Saturday night.

Alpha Theta, Pi Lambda Phi, wishes to announce that it stood behind the Liberal Party ticket and Sol Blickman, Sigma Alpha Mu candidate for Union Board, 100 percent in the election Thursday.

Neoma Lichtenberg Wed To Lester Budd

Miss Neoma Lichtenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lichtenberg, 1710 Roosevelt, became the bride of Lester Earl Budd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob E. Budd, 45 W. 33rd St., Sunday, April 6 at the Lincoln Hotel. The ceremony was solemnized in the presence of the immediate families by Rabbi Elias Charry and Cantor Myro Glass. The bride wore an afternoon dress in aquamarine with brown accessories and her maid of honor, her sister, Miss Nancy Lichtenberg, wore a green print dress. The groom was attended by his brother, Harold Budd. A dinner for the families followed the ceremony. After a week's honeymoon in Chicago, the couple are at home in Indianapolis. Both the bride and groom are graduates of Butler University.

Watching the Cincinnati Reds lose their opening game Tuesday, among others, were Ferd Born and Art Rose.

Mrs. Ben Paller and daughter Judy spent the Passover holidays with her parents in Chicago. Mr. Paller joined them on the weekends.

Daniel Frisch addressed a joint meeting of the Gary Zionist District and Lake Lodge of B'nai B'rith, Tuesday night.

Senator and Mrs. Jacob J. Weiss and children drove to Baton Rouge, La., where they visited Sen. Weiss' brother and family and then motored on to New Orleans. After trips to Mobile, Ala., and Pensacola, Fla., they returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rose and two sons have returned from a trip to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Manuel Freeman and son Irving Joel, 3340 Carrollton, spent the spring vacation touring Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, visiting friends and relatives.

Mrs. David Friedman and Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hollander, of Los Angeles, Calif., are visiting relatives and friends here before going on an extended trip to New York and points East.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester J. Lyons and Mrs. J. L. Lyons of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bernstein and family of Memphis, Tenn., spent last week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Beck, at 2546 N. New Jersey street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Silver and son, Dr. David M. Silver, and Mrs. Ben Simon spent several days in Chicago last week, visiting relatives.

Mrs. T. Jackson spent a day last week with her sister at the Home Lawn in Martinsville.

GERMAN EXILES MARRIED IN FORT WAYNE

Special FT. WAYNE—Mr. Jacques I. Mayer, native of Frankfurt, Germany, and resident of this city since last September, and Miss Marion Brownspan, who was born in Wiesbaden, Germany, were united in marriage by Rabbi Frederick A. Doppelt in a simple ceremony at noon Thursday in the Temple. Mr. and Mrs. Felix Mayer, cousins of the bridegroom, were the couple's only attendants.

Allan Bloom was in Chicago March 29, attending the conference on "Tomorrow's Children." He was honorary vice president for Indiana. On April 14 he was guest speaker at the annual meeting of Lebanon (Ind.) Council of Social Agencies.

Miss Emma Messing will address groups in Lafayette, Crawfordsville and Frankfort early in May, on her experiences in Germany.

Mrs. Sultan Cohen has her mother, Mrs. Alexander, with her. The latter spent the winter in Texas.

MERRETT DE JONG MARRIES AT GLENCOE, ILL.

Special EVANSVILLE — The marriage of Miss Betty Felsenthal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Felsenthal, Glencoe, Ill., to Merrett DeJong, Evansville, took place at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the Northmoor Country Club in Glencoe. Mrs. Ben Rau, Indianapolis, was her sister's matron of honor and Mr. DeJong had his two brothers, Hubert and Max DeJong Jr., to serve as best men.

Sidney J. Weisman of Chicago, formerly of Indianapolis, visited over the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Weisman.

Mrs. Irving Abrams and daughter Nancy, of Los Angeles, Calif., are visiting Mrs. Abrams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Baer.

BUT ELECTRIC LIGHTS ARE

So Much Better

Electric WATER HEATING IS SAFE and CLEAN as Electric LIGHT

GATHERING up kerosene lamps and cleaning off the soot and smudge was a job—and you still had poor illumination at higher cost than today's Electric lights. Flameless Electric water heating is as big an improvement as Electric light! It's even more convenient, and just as clean. Automatically just enough current comes on to keep an ample supply of hot water at uniform temperature. No waste, because all the heat goes directly into the water. Everything's enclosed—sealed like a light bulb—operating efficiently at low cost.

HEBREW CALENDAR

Shevuoth June 1
Tisha B'ab Aug. 2
Rosh Hashanah Sept. 22
Yom Kippur Oct. 1

Holidays begin at sundown the day before the date designated.

The Editor's Chair:

Approximately a year and a half ago I wrote about the incident in which while eating in a small restaurant, I overheard three well-dressed men about thirty-five years of age agree after one of them had brought up the subject that Jews were ruining the insurance business. I didn't know what to do, and like a coward I kept my head between my shoulder blades, brooding, but did nothing.

Afterward I wrote about the incident in this "chair" and wondered what I could have done, what would have been the best way to act in the situation.

Just this week I was sitting in Wheeler's having breakfast when I heard in tones which were not a bit subdued, someone to the right of me say that the Jews were causing all the trouble in the world. His partner agreed with him, and he went on saying the Jews had ruined New York, the Jews owned everything, etc., etc.

I thought back specifically to the first incident, and must have decided that this time I should do something. So I did.

In rising wrath I charged: "That's a hell of a thing to say." One of the men, the one closer to me, who happened to be about fifty-five years old and in overalls, turned around to see who was talking to him, drawing the other's attention to me by his motion.

"You have a lot of nerve making remarks like that," I continued, now that they were both looking at me. While the man in overalls kept quiet (he didn't say another word all through the tableau) the scholarly looking man, with glasses and a professor's physiognomy, began to talk in strong tones, "Look at Dutch Schultz, the murderer! All you Jews are like that. And Shapiro the lawyer, you're all crooks."

It became obvious that I wasn't going to accomplish anything this time either, but my wrath was rising, and although I wanted to answer, "Look at Dillinger," and then name a list of other men, or to say what of it, they were crooks and that was that, I didn't. I called out, "I know where you get that stuff," and then I pointed to the cartoon on the editorial page of the Indianapolis Star I was reading. The scholarly looking fellow peered at the figure of Hitler and started to mumble. But my ire was still rising and I said in a tone which surprised me, "Shut Up," but he went on saying something about being tagged a

Social Ostracism For Recalcitrant Givers

THE question of whether social ostracism should be used to force niggardly givers to the Jewish Welfare Fund to contribute what their income warrants has been discussed in The Jewish Post before, and the attitude of the paper is well known to Indiana Jewry. Last year when a recalcitrant Jewish giver had refused even a second solicitation, the point was brought out that the individual was applying at that time for membership in Broadmoor Country Club. One of the drive leaders, who also was an officer at Broadmoor, ventured the statement that the membership might very properly be held up if the person refused to meet his communal obligations, but at the same time could afford the cost of a membership at Broadmoor.

The editor of The Post happened to know this individual and knew also that his membership was held up for at least a three-month period. Whether there was any connection between the two, The Post does not know, but there very easily could have been, and, in the opinion of The Post, there very properly should have been.

This same question is discussed in an editorial in The Jewish Ledger of Hartford, Conn., in which a statement by Rabbi Leo Franklin of Detroit in connection with this issue is quoted. Rabbi Abraham J. Feldman is editor of The Jewish Ledger, and the editorial is printed here in full:

"The following is from the pen of Dr. Leo M. Franklin of Detroit. We realize that the subject is controversial and that there are very many people in our midst who feel that it is nobody's business what anyone chooses to give or not to give to public causes and to the support of synagogues or other local institutions. But precisely because it is controversial, it is likely to stimulate thought and in as much as we are on the eve of the United Jewish Appeal, we publish this statement by the noted rabbi of Detroit and shall be glad to have the thought of any of our readers who may wish to express themselves on this subject:

"Said Rabbi Franklin:

Democracy In Local Organizations

THE POST has been asked whether if the nominating committee of Kirshbaum Center returned only one name for each of the vacancies on the board, The Post would present a slate of its own. The question was not asked by anyone authorized to speak, although the person happened to be a board member and also a member of the nominating committee. But it should not have been necessary to ask such a question, not so much from the standpoint of The Post, but

"In course of conversation with a friend from the East the other day, our talk turned to the fact that in every community there are men of large means, who indulge themselves and their families in every form of luxury but never accept a proper share of responsibility to the community of which they are a part. They deny themselves nothing. They have fine homes; luxurious automobiles; they travel extensively; they often gamble for high stakes, but as frequently as not they contribute little or nothing to the support of the congregation, the charities and other communal organizations. "How," I asked, "do you deal with such people in your city?" To this my friend replied as follows:

"I was for a long time one of a group of men who played regularly at a rather exclusive club for pretty high stakes. It was not infrequent that one or the other of the party would win or lose several hundred dollars at a single sitting. We could afford to do so. But to my amazement I learned during our last drive for the Allied Jewish Campaign that one of the regular players was not a contributor to that cause. His card had been assigned to me. At first he hedged and protested that it was all a mistake. But he refused to say what he had given or would pledge to give now. I had the records searched and discovered that his greatest contribution, given some years ago, was a miserly pittance. Thereupon, I laid down this ultimatum. A man who cannot afford to give more to charity than this man gives cannot afford to play in this game. I refused to play with him again. Either he shall be asked to leave this group or I shall leave it. That is final."

"Needless to say, my friend is still a member of the group at his club. But his attitude is definitely the proper one. Men who refuse to meet their community obligations should be socially ostracized. They should be stamped with a kind of mark of Cain. They lack self-respect. Why should you respect them?

"Isn't this something that should give many of our friends food for thought—and serve as a spur to action?"

from the standpoint of the nominating committee. How can any Jewish organization in this day allow a nominating committee selected by the board to name members for that board and only name one person for each vacancy. There is no election here. The membership gets no chance to vote; all it can do is approve.

The burden rests with the nominating committee, and if the nominating committee does not want an election, The Post will not intervene.

Mrs. Roosevelt Tells of a Bit of United States History That Her Husband Didn't Know—I happened to be going to speak to a meeting in Boston which my youngest son asked me to go to and I thought that I would look up, as my audience would be largely made up of Jewish people, some of the contributions which had been made by them to our government. And I found that way back in the revolutionary days, though most of us read in our history books about what Robert Morris did to keep the weak, young government of those days going financially, that it was another man whom I don't think many of us would know much about if it was not for a moving picture. Haym Solomon did almost as much as Robert Morris. Some people think he did something more because he gave practically his entire fortune and never was repaid, and $650,000 in those days was a great deal to give, and it was his genius which helped Robert Morris and which helped to keep our country alive.

And then our Boston friends were very much amused and I think very much surprised when I asked them if they happened to know who had given the final contribution to complete the Bunker Hill monument. Now, of course, New England is very proud of the Bunker Hill monument and it is a little hard to remind them that towards the last part of its erection the contributions lagged and there were $20,000 still not forthcoming. A Mr. Lawrence who was evidently a man of substance then, as his descendants have been, and a good citizen, gave $10,000 thinking that his other New England neighbors would give the other $10,000. But no, the other $10,000 was given by Judah Touro of New Orleans and finished the Bunker Hill monument.

I am particularly proud of that little bit of history because it is the only piece of American history I ever told my husband that he didn't know before.

How to Empty a Synagogue Told by The Jewish Transcript of Seattle, Wash.—A great wit once said there are three ways by which a rabbi can empty his synagogue. He can do this by having but one idea, and following up on it at all times. The second method is by always telling about the Bible; what's in it and what is not; and by avoiding talking about life and its fascinating realities. The third obsession is that of raising thunder with those in attendance, heaping odium on these for the sins of the absentees. But, as a matter of fact, the blame for empty seats in the synagogue does not rest upon the rabbi, but on the congregant. If sermons and rabbinical service do not sink in the Jewish mind, it is because the Jew takes but little to the synagogue. He reads few Jewish books, knows little of racial and religious aspiration or development; he offers no fertile soil for the spiritual seed which the rabbi always hopes to scatter among his flock.

What is needed is an intellectual, moral and spiritual revival, not one forced by suffering, but one based on a newer and higher concept of Judaism. Unless we bring some of that to the synagogue, all the combined eloquence of Hillel, Maimonides, Gottheil or Morais will be without avail. Before you start to cast stones at the rabbi or picture his shortcomings, take a little look at your own Jewish soul.

Nazi because he was honest enough to accuse the Jews of wrongdoing.

I realized that nothing was to be accomplished. The overalls fellow never said a word. The other, a man whom I've seen around a lot, and who I think is a lawyer, kept on going, mentioning Trotsky, and so on, although in a voice that was so low that I couldn't hear it any longer except when his inflection rose.

I sat around a while, worrying and thinking, and then without finishing my breakfast, went out into the clear air.

So I wonder. In one instance I kept quiet. In another I couldn't contain myself. Don't tell me I should have reasoned with the men, because even Rabbi Stephen S. Wise couldn't have made the slightest dent in the minds of the two bigots.

So, I wonder.
